

At Passage Wealth, it is important to us that you are well informed about what's happening in the markets. Here are a few of the key topics of conversation that we feel deserve the most attention this month. If you have any questions or would like to continue the conversation, let us know, and we appreciate the opportunity.

Inflation remains the topic-du jour after a lower than expected August Consumer CPI report of 0.1% (vs an expected 0.3%). Will inflation start falling or remain stubbornly high? Our expectations are inflation will continue to grow into 2022 before leveling off and falling back to a 2.5% annualized number later in the year. Of course, that assumes supply chains, the Delta variant, and labor all begin to normalize this quarter.

On the business side of things, the Producer Price Index (PPI) also showed increasing prices. Some (if not all) of these pricing increases will reach consumers. Some data continues to befuddle economists, with August retail sales growing 0.7% (vs an expected -0.6%), driven by furniture and general merchandise items. On the other hand, used cars fell by more than 3% as pricing fell off their June/July highs. The Fed is keeping a close eye here to determine what measures may be needed to slow down demand.

The labor market has also been a focus of the Fed and part of their reluctance to ease monetary policy. In August, the number of new jobs significantly – and surprisingly - missed estimates, with the US economy only adding 235,000 new jobs¹. On the bright side, July's report was revised upwards to just over 1 million. Unfortunately, it appears the Delta variant is slowing down hiring as we head into the fall, with leisure and hospitality jobs that have been big contributors to the past month's gains grinding to an abrupt halt. With the revisions and underwhelming new jobs numbers, the unemployment rate dropped to 5.2%. It's worth noting average hourly earnings rose 0.6% (vs. an expected 0.3%).

Together, the jobs report and a slightly cooling inflation picture may give the Fed a little more breathing room as they discuss near-term monetary policy changes. The market is currently anticipating the Fed's interest rate policy to remain steady through the end of the year and potentially through to early 2023 as well². However, we're expecting the Fed to reduce its influence in the bond market by beginning to reduce asset purchases that help keep interest rates low in late 2021 or early 2022. We expect this to create a potential (but temporary) spike in market volatility.

The speed of the economic recovery remains hampered by supply chain issues, though still advancing. Surveys of manufacturing managers still indicate the sector is expanding³, with manufacturing activity in August rising slightly (0.2%)⁴. Most economists expected a bigger number here, but at least auto manufacturing wasn't the main culprit of the miss this time. Reports still indicate that supply chain disruptions are holding back activity, but these impacts do appear to be improving for certain components such as lumber.

¹ Srouce: US Bureau of Labor Statistics, <https://www.bls.gov/news.release/empsit.nr0.htm>

² Source: CME FedWatch as of September 16, 2021

³ August ISM Manufacturing PMI and Markit US Manufacturing PMI readings above 50

⁴ Source: Federal Reserve

The bottom line: Economic data and current market trends look good. However, fear is creeping into the markets about how the Fed is going to manage inflation as we close out 2020. Be prepared for more nervous headlines around the Delta variant and potential market volatility in the next month.

Disclosures

The material presented includes information and opinions provided by a party not related to Thrivent Advisor Network. It has been obtained from sources deemed reliable; but no independent verification has been made, nor is its accuracy or completeness guaranteed. The opinions expressed may not necessarily represent those of Thrivent Advisor Network or its affiliates. They are provided solely for information purposes and are not to be construed as solicitations or offers to buy or sell any products, securities, or services. They also do not include all fees or expenses that may be incurred by investing in specific products. Past performance is no guarantee of future results. Investments will fluctuate and when redeemed may be worth more or less than when originally invested. You cannot invest directly in an index. The opinions expressed are subject to change as subsequent conditions vary. Thrivent Advisor Network and its affiliates accept no liability for loss or damage of any kind arising from the use of this information.

Investment advisory services offered through Thrivent Advisor Network, LLC., a registered investment adviser and a subsidiary of Thrivent. Clients will separately engage a broker-dealer or custodian to safeguard their investment advisory assets. Review the Thrivent Advisor Network ADV Disclosure Brochure and Wrap-Fee Program Brochure for a full description of services, fees, and expenses. Thrivent Advisor Network LLC advisors may also be registered representatives of a broker-dealer to offer securities products.

Passage Wealth is a part of Thrivent Advisor Network, LLC ("Thrivent"), a Registered Investment Adviser ("RIA"), located in the State of Minnesota. Thrivent provides investment advisory and related services for clients nationally. Thrivent will maintain all applicable registration and licenses as required by the various states in which Thrivent conducts business, as applicable. Thrivent renders individualized responses to persons in a particular state only after complying with all regulatory requirements, or pursuant to an applicable state exemption or exclusion.

Advisory Persons of Thrivent provide advisory services under a practice name or "doing business as" name or may have their own legal business entities. However, advisory services are engaged exclusively through Thrivent Advisor Network, LLC, a registered investment adviser. Passage Wealth and Thrivent Advisor Network, LLC are not affiliated companies. Information in this message is for the intended recipient[s] only. Please visit our website passage-wealth.com for important disclosures.